

European Platform tackling undeclared work

Governmental strategy for combating crime in the workplace

Norway

| Í,  | SummaryThe Norwegian governmental strategy for combatting crimein the workplace <sup>i</sup> was presented in 2015 and revised twicesince then (in 2017 and 2019). It has established a systemof cooperation between governmental agencies and otherorganisations. It aims to tackle crime in the workplace,including undeclared work. This practice example focuseson inter-organisational cooperation aimed at preventingundeclared work. |

| Aims and objectives  |
|--|
| The strategy for combatting crime in the workplace aims totackle various forms of crime linked to the workplace,including undeclared work affecting migrant workers inparticular. In order to improve detection, the strategyseeks to establish and formalise practical cooperationbetween the labour inspectorate, tax administration, police |

|                       | and social security inspectorate. In addition, it seeks to explore new possibilities that result from greater  |
|-----------------------|--|
|                       | cooperation and improve joint knowledge about offenders.   |
| Background context    | The strategy was adopted to address issues that violateNorwegian legislation concerning wages and workingconditions or national insurance and taxes, often in anorganised fashion. Its consequences include undeclaredwork, worker exploitation, distortion of competition orundermining social structure, or a combination thereof.                             |
|                       | Seven Work Crime Centres as well as a Joint NationalAnalysis Centre have been established in the main cities tohelp cooperation among the authorities. Formalisedcooperation plans and a guide about sharing informationbetween agencies have also been created. The authoritiesalso cooperate in rural areas, although it does not involvephysical centres. |
| Key objectives of the | General Objective:   |
| measure               | <ul> <li>To increase detection and deter breaches of regulations.</li> </ul>   |
|                       | Specific Objectives:   |
|                       | <ul> <li>To reduce the possibility of carrying out fraudulentbusiness activity;</li> </ul>  |
|                       | <ul> <li>To deter non-compliance with regulations;</li> </ul>  |
|                       | <ul> <li>To exclude businesses in breach of the law from the market;</li> </ul>  |
|                       | <ul> <li>To ensure that foreign workers are able to safeguardtheir rights and fulfil their duties;</li> </ul>   |
|                       | <ul> <li>To prevent customers and consumers fromcontributing to workplace crime when purchasinggoods and services;</li> </ul>  |
|                       | <ul> <li>To obtain, process and share information.</li> </ul>  |
| Main activities       | The governmental strategy creates a cooperation schemebetween different governmental agencies. The mainactivities carried out in the framework of this cooperationare:   |
|                       | Analysis;  |
|                       | Inspection;  |
|                       | <ul> <li>Informing/awareness raising, especially among foreign workers and clients and consumers.</li> </ul>   |
|                       | The relevant authorities collect intelligence and supervisekey actors, while also carrying out controls and informingforeign workers in order to ensure that their rights arerespected. They also target clients and consumers in orderto increase their awareness of the key actors in the market   |

|                                     | that are engaging in work-related crime and/or undeclared work.  |
|-------------------------------------|--|
|                                     | The specific activities carried out according to the specific groups being targeted are listed below.  |
|                                     | Key actors:  |
|                                     | <ul> <li>Collecting intelligence;</li> </ul>   |
|                                     | <ul> <li>Controlling and supervising.</li> </ul>   |
|                                     | Foreign workers:   |
|                                     | <ul> <li>Controlling and supervising;</li> </ul>   |
|                                     | <ul> <li>Distributing information and guidance foremployees.</li> </ul>   |
|                                     | Clients and consumers:   |
|                                     | <ul> <li>Interacting and collaborating with consumers;</li> </ul>  |
|                                     | <ul> <li>Collaborating with the media;</li> </ul>  |
|                                     | <ul> <li>Proposing adequate regulatory amendments;</li> </ul>  |
|                                     | <ul> <li>Supervising clients and consumers;</li> </ul>   |
|                                     | <ul> <li>Using the media to reach clients and consumers.</li> </ul>  |
| Funding/organisationalresources | The Norwegian Labour Inspection Authority has beenallocated EUR 4 million extra for tackling undeclared work.Similar amounts are allocated to the other authorities(labour inspectorate, tax authorities, police, NAV). Theextra funding has been used for hiring more experts,renting offices and setting up new technical solutions. |
|                                     | Four Ministries take the political decisions, which aretransmitted to the relevant agencies in the form of annualbudget letters. As regards the administration of the jointactivities, the general directors of all agencies involvedmeet twice per year to take decisions on budgets andcentral priorities.                           |
|                                     | Regarding the human resources allocated to the JointNational Analysis Centre, around 80 experts come from thelabour inspectorate, a similar number come from the taxauthorities and a smaller number of experts from the policeand social inspectorate.  |
|                                     | As for technical resources, bringing together four differentauthorities means in practice that new technical andlogistical structures need to be set up because systemscannot be shared.   |

|                                       | Outcomes  |
|---------------------------------------|---|
|                                       | It has been challenging to monitor the effectiveness of thispractice since there is not a common and unambiguousdefinition of the target group, results are expected in thelong term and the data available does not allow forevaluating the effects of the actions undertaken.However, the cooperation has been assessed as havinghad a positive impact on the ability of foreign workers toclaim respect for their rights and the consumers' ability tomake better choices and punish companies that engage inwork-related crime.       |
| Achievement ofobjectives          | <ul> <li>Regarding the effects of the strategy on key actors, measuring outcomes is complicated given the following:</li> <li>Absence of a common and unambiguous definition of the target group;</li> <li>Long-term nature of the effort;</li> </ul>   |
|                                       | <ul> <li>Lack of access to data.</li> <li>This has made practitioners aware of the fact that new evaluation methods are needed.</li> </ul>  |
|                                       | Concerning foreign workers, the inter-governmentalefforts aim to help them safeguard their rights and fulfiltheir duties. There are currently only a few data sourcesthat enable the evaluation of the effects of these activities,although the overall assessment from the agencies is thatthe activities help to make more foreign workers betterable to fulfil their duties and safeguard their rights.However, it is uncertain how big the effect is and whetherthe effort could have been designed more purposefully andeffectively. |
|                                       | Finally, the effects of the efforts concerning clients andconsumers have been evaluated by a few studies. Theagencies' overall assessment is that the efforts in 2019aimed at clients and consumers have contributed tostrengthening their ability and willingness to not picksuppliers who engage in work-related crime andundeclared work more generally.   |
| Lessons learnt andsuccess factors | The cooperation benefited from a political commitmentand clear agreements and common goals between theinstitutions involved. These formal elements need to becomplemented by a new organisational culture, which tooksome time and adjustment to be developed. Informationsharing has been an important obstacle for thecooperation.  |

| Transferability | The joint centres and activities can be established by allMember States in order to improve the efficiency of thefight against undeclared work. |
|-----------------|---|
|                 | The existence of a common understanding at all levels (notonly at the leadership level) of the added value broughtby the cooperation is needed. |
